

Can their love be resuscitated?

It wasn't as if they hadn't tried in twenty-five years. Chris and Amy sought help for their constant marital conflict. They longed for mutual respect and unconditional love. But they couldn't break years of unhealthy patterns in their tumultuous marriage.

Then, the unthinkable happened.

Just as a sudden worldwide pandemic is declared, Chris is hospitalized with a life-threatening condition. Amy is forced to leave Chris at the Emergency Room doors.

The pandemic separates Chris and Amy as they struggle to deal with the greatest trial of their lives. As calamity topples their world, they are completely unprepared to deal with the nonstop traumas. There's no going back. Will Chris end up alive, disabled, or ... dead? What will their future look like now?

Marriage Mentors, Deb & Bruce Potts, found themselves separated by a pandemic while Bruce spent thirty days in intensive care. Through the many shocking and distressful situations they experienced, they were sustained by a strong faith, marriage, and community. They were compelled to weave their experiences into a captivating story to help and encourage anyone going through serious life struggles. No matter what, there is hope!
